

AFTER DRAPER FUND IN BANK

An effort to be made by the Broadway National Bank of Boston to trace a trust fund made in favor of George O. Draper, nephew of former Governor Draper, to satisfy a judgment of $2,500 recently rendered against him. The bank said it had no record of the fund, but that it was Draper's nephew, a brother, is also named as a beneficiary.

It is alleged that when William P. Draper, former United States Ambassador to Italy, died he gave a large part of his fortune to the son, George O. Draper. The will further alleged that George assigned the interest in his father's estate to a trust fund of $25,000, of which $2,500 was to be paid to the son, George O. Draper, and the balance to be held for the benefit of George's children.

THE FEMALE WITH THE SPECIE

By MORTON BIRGE.
(With Annelise to Kidding)

When a Boston man discovers that he has an extra ten. He's not happy but he's agent. It is the foolishness of men, that his wife will board her parties for the coming bargain sale. For the female with the specie is more prudent than the male.

Give a Boston man a dollar, he will blow it on cigars. But his wife keeps the nickels that she saves for trumpery cars. When the husband chimes of betting, their naturally face turns pale. For the female with the specie is more cautious than the male.

In the end, if they save money and are eating life in life. Then the husband grabs the credit and he boasts unto his wife. But you'll notice how many are the times who bank the male. For the female with the specie is more saving than the male.

Advice to Lovelorn

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WATCH THE BOUNDARY LINE
DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
 I am a girl of eighteen, and have a friend three years my senior. I

THERE is no harm in your friend's providing you do not overstep the boundary line of mere acquaintance. Of course the other girl must be told of your friendship, so there can be no misunderstanding. It is different, however, if the young man is trying to deceive either of you. In any event, it is wise to be careful. Let friendship only exist between you and your friend and you will have nothing to regret.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and deeply in love with a man one year my senior. He writes to me frequently and in his letters is very loving. He calls to see me often and takes me out. Do you think he cares for me, as at times he calls out with different girls? He is a very good, straightforward and honest fellow. I have known him eight years. His sister is my friend.

S. F.

LOOK out for this young man. He does not care for you unless he ments you, and such letters as you desire to write should not be written or received until you are engaged. As to his friendship with other girls, it is natural and proper provided it is not overdone. He should like you the best if you are well behaved, gentle and sincere. First of all you must have his admiration, and through high principles and self-respect only can this be acquired. Avoid showing him how much you care for him.

WHO IS GOOD?

"I say, Slim is about to retire from business," said one man to another. "He's a capital chap and well deserves a rest. He's going to devote the remainder of his life to doing good."

"Really?" asked the other, with a humorous twinkle in his eye. "And who's going to do the good?"

Election Inspires the National Democracy for 1912

We appreciate the friendly salutation, but we find our richest reward in the consciousness of a public duty done, and in the confident hope of a greater and more comprehensive victory when the Democratic ballots fall upon the National issue of 1912.

Why should the protest of the State Department weaken or its resentment abate, now that the wrong has hardened into a Russian habit? The time has fully come for the State Department to act decisively. Russia has set a deep stigma upon the face of American citizenship. Our further sunderance would be simply pusillanimous.

Build Up Your Character by Thinking of Agreeable Things

If You Know Some One
You Dislike Very Much
Begin To-day and Look for Some Praiseworthy Quality in That Person

THERE is some one you dislike; some one who jars upon your nerves; some one whom you disapprove, and whenever the name of that individual is mentioned you are conscious of a disagreeable sensation. It is never a source of happiness to dislike any one. There is always a penalty attached to an aversion.

And quite unconsciously to most of us there is a slow but sure degeneration taking place in our characters when we give much thought to the people we dislike, because we are grafting upon our natures some portion of those disagreeable traits and qualities which occupy our minds.

We become to greater or less degree, like the things of which we think and

If, therefore, you think and talk a great deal about the faults and failings of your friends (or your enemies), you are grafting a branch of poison ivy on the vine of your own heart.

This is a scientific FACT.

Every thought has its effect on our natures, just as every moment spent in practice of music or painting is

An Interesting Experiment

The art of character building is the greatest and most important art and profession in life, so it is a matter of serious moment how we do this work.

No one of us finds it possible to like every person we meet. There are people so unlovable, so aggressive, so unpleasant to encounter, that one

There would be made of stone who did not recognize their repellent traits.

Yet were we to set about looking for some agreeable quality in these antagonistic personalities we would find them.

This, then, should be our work.

The moment we encounter a disagreeable or even an unattractive individual, if we have time to give that person any thought at all, let us turn the mind toward a path of exploration and seek for something worth praising. And finding it, let us speak of it. Then having spoken of it, let us THINK of this quality whenever the person occurs to us as an object of criticism.

It will prove an interesting experi-

He Writes About
Ma's Actor Brother

WELL, sed Pa, I see that Mister Rodgers has flew across the continent. I think it is the most wonderful feat since the grate flight made by Osler Joe's wife, wen she ran away from him and went to London. That was sum thing sed Pa. As the husband sed, when he cat home and found the note tied to the cloth on the humbel table,

Well, said Ma, now that you have all yure talking about Mister Rodgers, wish you wud tell me yure reason for not sitting here in time for the last course of our two (2) course dinner.

brother is playing a trick on me," said. I thought you wud be glad to know something about yure brother, sez Pa. I made up my mind that I wud stic around the actor's club & find out how yure brother had done in his work in the frozen North. He told me, sez I, that yure brother was one of the finest actors that he had ever saw or heard. Isent that truly, sez Ma, wen is yure frend going to cum & see us?

He is going to be here this evening, said Pa. Just for a hour or so, to talk about the old times that he used to spend with yure brother. There he cums now, said Pa. & just then the door bell rang for a long time, & in cum Mister Offenlat. He was very short, fat man with red, curly hair, & the minut that Ma looked at him onst she looked at Pa twiet.

Wife, and Ed. this is Mister Offenalt, the gentleman that said he knew your brother up in the frozen North the upper part of Michigan, where your brother is playing in romantic drama.

I am glad to know you, and Ma to Mister Offenalt & so you know my brother, well, well. I am so glad that he has made good in Michigan.

Well, Mister Offenalt, is bent so hard to make good in Michigan, but it takes a hero to make good in the

How did my dear brother look? sed Ma to Mister Oftentleit.

He looked kind of groggy, sed Mister Oftentleit, his euff was fuzzy whare it ought to be smooth, & his new style hat was smooth whare it ought to be fuzzy, but I guess he was going along fair. He had one song
